There are a lot of problems in Africa. Droughts always happen in Africa so people are very poor. Droughts dry the land leading to not enough water to grow plants so there is very little food. The worst case is that the water there is also very dirty to drink. They always get sick and become weak because of that.

First, people are too poor to buy food to eat because the food is very expensive. Apart from that, they do not receive much education. There are very few teachers and books at schools. They can only share one book to read. The facilities are old and dirty. Besides, there are not enough chairs and desks so they have to sit on the floor to have lessons.

To help the people in Africa, we can donate money to charity. We can collect old books and clothes as well as selling flags. All these events can show our support for them.

Mark and the monster

A long time ago, there was a man who was very strong in the village. His name was Mark. The villagers thought he could lift a bug and a heavy rock or tree. Mark was as strong as an ox.

One day, a fierce monster appeared in the village. The monster killed several innocent villagers. The villagers were very indignant and they found Mark. The woman said, 'There is a monster in that cave. Please help us kill it. It is as big as a mountain.'

Mark shouted, 'Come out! You monster!' Soon, the monster came out and it was very indignant. Mark was terrified by the fierce appearance of the monster. Mark was as timid as a mouse.

Suddenly, a cake fell out of Mark's pocket. The monster saw the cake and said, 'Can you give me that cake?' Mark said, 'Yes, as long as you don't hurt me.'

But in the end, Mark killed the monster while it wasn't paying attention. The villagers all felt relieved. The villagers said, 'Thank you! Mark, we will treat you to dinner.' Later, there were no more monsters in the village.

Working at a Charity fun fair

Last Saturday, Amy and her sister Penny were at Rainbow Children Centre. They saw a poster which was about helpers for Charity Fun Fair. They wanted to be the helpers. They could either make cakes or cookies to sell at a food stall. They wanted to join the fair because they wanted to help people who were poor.

However, neither Amy nor Penny could cook. They were disappointed because they couldn't be the people. They found Miss Chan because they wanted to tell Miss Chan that they didn't know how to cook. Miss Chan saw them and she asked, 'neither Amy nor I could cook. What should we do in the charity fun fair?' Miss Chan said, 'I know you are good at making handicrafts so you can make some food like crafts.' They said in delighted, 'Thank you for your idea.'

In the end, they made many kinds of food-like crafts. People liked their crafts so people bought a lot of them. They raised a lot of money. Amy and Penny were over the moon because they had the sense of achievement.
